This spring, Richmond Art Gallery presents With wings like clouds hung from the sky, an installation by conceptual artist Karen Tam. Since 2014, Tam has researched artist Lee Nam: a Chinese immigrant to British Columbia in the early 20th century, and a friend and colleague of Canadian painter Emily Carr. At Richmond, Tam evokes the life of this artist and his influence on Carr's approach to painting in the mid-1930s.

Through a set of exhibitions and residencies at the Mendel Art Gallery (2014) and the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria (2017) Tam has reimagined Lee's painting studio in Victoria, BC's Chinatown in the 1930s. In Tam's Richmond exhibition, Lee's painting studio connects lineages and kinships among Chinese, Hong Kongese, Taiwanese and Canadian ink brush practitioners including Qi Baishi, Sheila Chao, Yu Fei'an, Lui Luk Chun, Anna Wong, Ming Yeung, Jeannie Lee, Pink Ma, Lucy Feng, Harry Yu, Kileasa Wong, and Karen Tam's mother, Tam Yuen Yin Law.

In early 2019, Tam made a research visit to the Lower Mainland to learn about and meet with the local ink brush community. The works she selected to include in this exhibition show direct connections to the teachers and stylistic legacies of both Lee Nam and Chinese painting in Canada. These beautiful and delicate paintings highlight trans-national lineages of artists and the contemporary work of Chinese-Canadian artists.

"Tam's engagement with these local artists cultivates an international and cross-generational conversation. She's bringing greater visibility to the artistic legacy of Chinese-speaking communities in Canada" states exhibition curator Shaun Dacey.

Tam's exhibition shows the influences of East and West that shaped the context that Lee Nam and Emily Carr painted in, while also opening up a broader dialogue with immigrant artistic experience in Canada. Tam's work is unique in its sincere outreach and conversation with inter-generational and multilingual artists, connecting contemporary and traditional forms in dialogue.

Karen Tam states: "This exhibition project is constantly evolving, from focusing solely on the connections between Emily Carr and Lee Nam at the beginning, to now, where I invite the art-making and activities of the Richmond Chinese community into the installation space as a way to engage visitors and to animate the exhibition, making it more dynamic and active."

Alongside the exhibition, Richmond Art Gallery will produce a publication in partnership with the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria and Varley Art Gallery. The book will encompass both Tam's historical research on Lee Nam and her artistic responses. After four years of Tam's research, development and experimentation, Shaun Dacey adds "it is an opportune moment to produce a book". The publication will include essays by Karen Tam, AGGV curator Haema Sivanesan, and Griffin Projects Director Lisa Baldissera, among others. Dacey adds: "The publication will be an important legacy for this exhibition, connecting Tam's contemporary conceptual art practice with a history of Chinese-Canadian cultural exchange, highlighting Chinese artists living and working in Canadian communities, while also shedding new light on Asian influences in the work of Emily Carr."
